ADEQUATE PREPAREDNESS SOUGHT BY LEGION

FALL BUSINESS NOW UNDERWAY; BUYERS COME TO MARKETS

Merchants Declare The Heaviest Season Is Just Starting

ALL INDUSTRIES GOING FULL TILT

Expect No Letup With Good Values Being Offered Buyer

With the advent of fall weather merchants in both cities today declared themselves jubilant over the general fall season outlook. Several of the leading merchants in both cities stated that business over the week-end reached untold totals as the first fall impetus was felt in the local retail markets.

Possibly the largest crowd of the year was in evidence Saturday night on the main thoroughfares of the cities and the busy establishments reminded observers of the days during the war when buying was done in feverish haste and large quantities.

Many merchants expressed the belief this morning that people are turning more and more to the necessities of life and are drawing away from buying other than needed things in the home.

Cause for the increase is shown in the heavy ginning reports given in day after day by local ginning companies and the fact that all industries in the cities are working full time, some day and night shifts. Members of industrial plants are advertising daily for men to take laborers jobs. Unusual numbers of people were in the cities over the weekend despite threatening weather to fill the needs of the early fall.

Indications locally point to one of the best fall business periods seen here in a number of years. Other sections of the valley are reporting like increased trading activity with the conclusion of hot weather periods, said by many to have been the cause for the delay in the usual fall rush.

Local merchants look expectantly toward the next four months believing that an increase in all classes of business will be noted.

New industries are opening up, the cities are now carrying on and preparing for further civic improvements and there is little reason to doubt that this season will be one of the very best seen in many years throughout the territory.

WORMS APPEARING ALL OVER STATE

Auburn Expert Warns Against Ravages of Crop Pest

AUBURN, Ala., Oct. 5—Special—The fall brood of worms have appeared in Alabama. Larvae of the army worm, the grass worm or fall army worm, the cotton leaf worm, and the corn earworm have already been found at Auburn, by W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist.

The army worm and grass worm have made their appearance locally in Lee, Macon, and Montgomery counties and are damaging hay crops.

At Auburn, they have eaten the leaves of kudza and are beginning to damaged soybeans and other hay crops.

Since their food supply has increased, due to recent rains, Mr. Ruffin advises poisoning with calcium arsenate. This should be done in the same manner that cotton is poisoned, allowing 5 to 6 pounds per acre for each application.

The cotton leaf worm has made its appearance at Auburn and is defoliating the cotton, However, this is destroying the food for the boll weevil, and is, therefore beneficial.

President Green Stirs Delegates By His Address Today

(Associated Press)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 5.—President Will Green stirred the delegates of the American Federation of Labor to great enthusiasm today at the opening of its 45th annual convention by declaring that the federation had just begun to fight for the child labor amendment.

"If the impression prevails that we have given up the fight, after the temporary set-back," he said, "may I correct that impression with all the earnestness of my soul."

Mr. Green, who succeeded the late Samuel Gompers, who for more than 40 years was head of the organization, received a warm welcome when he called the convention to order. He said the work of organized labor is the work of humanity and he proposed to mobilize the entire strength of every city, town and village in the country.

"Our great mission,' he said, "is to reach out and bring together the toilers of the nation so that our position will be unassailable."

The delegates cheered when Mr. Green declared that the organized labor movement had been handicapped and limited by some of the courts which had seen fit to usurp their powers in granting injunctions.

2 CARS TURN OVER ON SAME NIGHT WITH FOUR LOCAL PEOPLE

WERE ON WAY FROM HOSPITAL

Rain Makes Road On Lacon Hill Slippery; Car Goes In Ditch

Four well known local people, having been in two automobiles which turned over Sunday night on the Bee Line highway, between here and Birmingham, and escaping with only minor scratches, were wondering Monday whether a jinx was pursuing them, or whether they should be thankful to their "lucky stars" that the accidents were no more serious than they were.

Occupants of the two separate cars which turned over were: Miss Annie Mae Gardner, her brother, Roger Gardner, Gil Draper and O. R. Grimes the latter professor of science in the Decatur high school.

During the day members of the party had visited at the bedside of Miss Flora Gardner, sister of Miss Gardner and Mr. Gardner, who is ill at St. Vincent's hospital in Birmingham. Early last night the party started on the return trip here in Mr. Draper's car.

A drizzling rain had fallen and the road became very slippery. While the car was coming down the mountain near Lacon, Mr. Draper lost control of the machine when it skidded and the car swerved to one side and went into a ditch. A short distance from the scene of the accident, there was a fill of nearly 50 feet and it was fortunate that the car went off the road at a place where the fill was not so pronounced.

The party then obtained a taxi-driver to bring them on to the Twin Cities, and the party proceeded without further interruption until a point just south of Flint was reached, when the taxi driver lost control of his car and it skidded over into a ditch, turning completely over.

Again good fortune was with the travellers for none of the party was seriously hurt. All suffered bruises, however, and Mr. Gardner suffered a severe sprain of his right arm.

MITCHELL REPORTS AND IS GIVEN COPY OF ARMY'S CHARGES

Former Chief of the Air Service Calls Upon the Inspector-General

COLONEL SILENT AFTER HIS VISIT

Courtmartial Not To Be Convened Before Next Week

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Colonel William Mitchell, of the army air service, reported today to the inspector general's office of the war department, where disciplinary proceedings against him are under consideration.

The case at this stage is in the hands of Colonel George A. Nugent, of the inspector general's office, and the purpose was to furnish the Colonel with copies of the proposed charges against him, growing out of his San Antonio statements, which precipitated the present aviation inquiry.

Before any charges are made, Colonel Mitchell will be given an opportunity to make any reply he desires in advance. Colonel Nugent's recommendations as to further proceedings will be made after he has considered what Colonel Mitchell has to say.

Colonel Mitchell spent about 20 minutes in Colonel Nugent's office and waived aside questioners when he came out.

"I haven't a thing to say," he said. "Ask them."

He went to the office of the judge advocate general before he left the building.

Formal action to convene a court-martial probably will not be taken before next week.

Throng Watches Party Of Fifty Officers In Sensational Raid

(Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5—Three men were shot and killed in a pistol fight at a roadhouse near upper Creve Coeur Lake, St. Louis county, early today. James Quinn, one of the proprietors, said he killed the men single handed. The dead are: Vincent Goedde, 21, Ben Jean Hoffman, 24 and James Tully, all alleged gangsters.

Quinn was unhurt. He told authorities the shooting resulted from an attempted holdup and that he was under fire not only of the men killed but of two others who fled. Although the bodies of the men, bearing 17 wounds, seemed to indicate expert firing, Quin, who is 34 years old and a former member of the navy, declared he had never before fired a shot.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—Gang warfare, always close to the danger point in New York's congested East Side burst forth in a series of shootings early today. As a result two men are dead and a third lies dangerously wounded with six bullets in his body.

Encroachments on the territory of rival drug and rum running gangs caused the break, police said.

Irving Madonic, a taxicab driver, died in a restaurant in which he had sought refuge after unidentified assailants had lured him from a cabaret and shot him.

An unidentified man was shot and killed at 13th street and First avenue. His assassin calmly pocketed his revolver and walked away after the killing.

Mayer Lewis, a glazier was waylaid and shot six times within sight of his wife and nine year old son, while on his way to work. He is in a critical condition.

CHICAGO, Oct. 5—For several hours early today, Joseph "Yellow Kid" Weil's luxurious hotel, Shenandoah, was surrounded by 50 policemen while others searched the six story structure for two men wanted for robbery and murder.

A throng stood in the street while the "Yellow Kid," premier confidence man, nervously paced the lobby. Two women, friends of Fred Goetz, former Illinois football star, and Hymie Weiss wanted in connection with the slaying of Barnie Hermandez and the wounding of Dr. Henry Cress, in a holdup, were arrested, but the men were not found.

For Albany-Decatur Daily.

THEY have a real Democracy in France, and their best public men, powerful in mind, simple in heart, and truly democratic are what statesmen in a republic should be.

ON MONDAY, Clemenceau, who carried the French government through the most horrible period of the war, well named "The Tiger," for his determined courage, celebrated his 84th birthday.

Where did he celebrate it? In some French palace formerly occupied by Kings and Emperors? No in a little cabin, such as a prosperous American chauffeur would disdain on the Vendee coast overlooking the wild waters upon which the Basque ancestors of Marshal Foch hunted whales in ancient days.

CLEMENCEAU, 84 years old is not idle, instead of wasting time contemplating his past glories, Clemenceau is writing a book dealing with "The Conception of God Through the Ages."

He is putting his thoughts in order.

LAW TO ELIMINATE THE PROFITEER AND SLACKER IS URGED

National Commander Of Legion Speaks As Convention Opens

PREPAREDNESS STRESSED ALSO

Peace Best Preserved By Adequate Defense Drain Contends

(Associated Press)

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 5—Laws under which a war might be conducted "with no profiteers and no slackers" was urged by James A. Drain, national commander of the American Legion, in an address before the national Legion convention today.

The surest way to preserve peace in America, he said, is adequate preparedness.

"The word of the American Legion has always been and always shall be pledged for peace," he declared, "but we know the world cannot have peace simply by wishing for it and denying the possibility of war. We know peace must rest upon international justice and preparedness—international justice by the best means available—and preparedness based upon a sound military policy for the country a policy consistent with its history, its ideals and resources.

"The American Legion believes peace time preparedness for a war may be thrust upon the nation will, on the one hand reduce probabilities of war, and on the other, better prepare us for defense of ourselves if forced into war.

"The Legion now has a special committee of able men engaged in making a careful study for peace and the best way to secure and retain it.

"The Legion believes a wise provision in peace for the use of all available resources of the nation to carry forward successfully an unavoidable war, involves some form of adequate federal law, by which at the need of the nation, not only will there be available man-power to fight, but man power to work, factory-power to produce and money-power to finance a war.

"In short, a way to carry forward war with no profiteers and no slackers."

The commander presented a 150 page report for the period of his commandership. He said the past year had been one of success in all Legion enterprises.

"Service to the community, state and nation is what the American Legion says it lived for and it has no right to exist as a national institution, save through its capacity to give that service," he said.

"Within that service its first duty so recognized from the beginning, is to the disabled, those men who paid an extra price for the part they played in the war. After this, duty lies to the orphans of the veterans, the children of those whom the war took out of the world before their normal time. After that what we call Americanism or what is more accurately defined, as better citizenship, with all that those words imply."

SYNOPSIS

Eileen Mannering has been visiting her son, Bob, at the jail. Bob is accused of manslaughter, having been in a car that crashed into another, killing a woman. In leaving she meets her husband, John Mannering, from whom she is temporarily estranged, because, as District Attorney, he insists upon prosecuting his own son. Then she meets Jerome Wallace, John's opponent in the election. "I see what the office would enable me to do for you and your son," Wallace tells her.

Eileen turned, and this time not to betray her feelings. Into her mind leaped the remembrance of John with his resolute: "I am District Attorney. I will do my duty." It was an unpleasant memory fading before a later and fresher one. John, with his arms full of packages for Bob. He must have bought a sample of every brand of cigarettes in the world to be certain that he had not overlooked his son's favorite.

A queer picture that last compared to the first, thought Eileen, and it enabled her to get a grip on herself. Yet very much kinder was she now to Wallace. When he held out his hand to say goodbye she took it.

And not slow to take advantage of the privilege, he held it as he went on to say:

"So far as you are concerned, you are in a most advantageous position. No matter which way the election goes your son's freedom is assured. You know he is safe if Mannering remains in office, and should I be elected I pledge you my support."

As the car rolled away he coolly waved a parting salutation.

And when her face lighted before his words with a joy she could not conceal Wallace still clung to her hand and even gave it ever so light a reassuring squeeze that through no possible mistake could she be unaware of his loyal friendship.

Thus they were when John Mannering came forth from the jail and moved towards them. Careless at first, he displayed real surprise when he recognized Eileen's companion.

Yet Wallace awaited him with the utmost composure, greeting him with a friendliness which bordered upon effusiveness.

John, it must be said, was rather cold. Having cast a fleeting glance at his wife, he regarded Wallace rather curiously before climbing into the car with a curt nod.

Unabashed, Wallace waited upon the sidewalk as if to watch the departure of two very dear friends. And as the car rolled away he coolly waved a parting salutation to Eileen and cried in meaning tones, "Remember."

Having thus expressed himself, he watched the car disappear around a corner before he went his way. And it may be said as a curious matter of interest that in discussing the election with Slick Jennings later in the day Wallace expressed high hopes of his election. But this undoubtedly was due rather to an overwhelming confidence in the astuteness and transcendent abilities of his manager than to any other cause.

CHAPTER VIII

Outside of the incident of the lilacs, it had been years since Eileen had given a thought to Wallace. She had never taken their youthful friendship seriously. A certain mystery, a hint of dark and unfathomed depths about him had claimed her girlish fancy for the moment. But it had been no more than a passing affair, disregarded with the development of her all pervading love for John Mannering and forgotten with marriage and the swift rush of busy, contented years which had followed. True, rumors not at all complimentary to the man had circulated freely in the circles in which she moved, but in the fullness of her own happy life Eileen had not listened to gossip.

Now, however, intent with all the resolution of her nature upon helping Bob, her meeting with Wallace, regardless of first impressions, had re-established him in her mind in a most favorable guise. Apparently through all these years she had neglected a very real friendship. A spontaneous, unselfish and generous friendship which, careless of indifference, could bring Wallace to her side with the tender of his kind offices in the very hour of her need. Thus it was that, as she drove away from the jail at her husband's side, Wallace occupied her thoughts with a completeness which spoke volumes for that gentleman's suave skill with the opposite sex.

As she reviewed their meeting she recalled, with uplifted hope, that his had been no offer of assistance, so general in its nature as to be obviously nothing more than a polite subterfuge. It had been an outspoken promise, a definite pledge without limitation or condition, seemingly leaping from a heart overflowing with sympathy to help her, or rather to procure the freedom of her son, which to her mind was the same thing. But hold. There had been a condition. True, not one subject to his control, but a condition nevertheless, and one of such vital importance that unfulfilled all else would be of little value. Wallace must be elected District Attorney. His election was the very gist of the matter. Wallace elected and Bob would go free. It was all very simple, but—

John must be defeated. There was no middle course.

From the recesses of her heart that wee small voice raised its protest. John was her husband. At the altar of God she had plighted him her troth. The very words of the marriage service seemed to echo in her ears as her eyes dropped to the ring upon her finger. "For better—for worse."

The loyalty of years, the common hopes and ambitions of their married years registered prompt objection, while her own pride in his accomplishments joined the objecting chorus. To her John's success had been a marvelous thing. She had watched him climb through the years with but a vague appreciation of the mighty part her own gentle devotion and encouragement had played, but still sensing with satisfaction a complete partnership in it all, she had striven to worthily fulfill, as the mistress of his household, the added social duties accruing to herself. Proud, indeed, had she been to be the wife of the District Attorney and with him had come to regard his re-election not so much from any desire to retain the office, but rather as a test. A justification of the policies he had inaugurated, an approval by the people of high ideals for which he had long struggled.

Even as Eileen watched her husband she realized with a tremor of fear that should John Mannering fail of re-election it would mean more than defeat. Rather would it be a crushing blow delivered at the very pedestal of his lifelong endeavors. One which would shake, if not shatter, hopes closest to his heart and render futile years of his tireless labors.

In that instant a great tenderness for John asserted itself in Eileen's heart only to die before thoughts of Bob and the gloomy jail; of the jingling keys, clicking locks and clanging doors, all sounding a note in that symphony of woe and loss of freedom which must beat continually upon the consciousness of her son. Motherhood claimed Eileen to the exclusion of all else. Her boy must be gotten out of that prison at any price, at any cost.

We sell the upper lower than the lower. In other words the higher is lower. Most people don't like the upper, although it is lower, on account of being higher. When you occupy an upper you have to go up to go to bed and get down when you get up. You can have the lower if you pay higher. The upper is lower than the lower because it is higher. NATIONAL ANTHEM NOW 111 YEARS OLD

Author Well Known In This State Where He Visited

(Associated Press)

NOTE—The following article by Peter A. Brannon, acting head of the State Department of Archives and History has been prepared especially for distribution by the Associated Press.

September just past marked the one hundred anl eleventh anniversary of the writing of the "Star Spangled Banner," national anthem of the United States of America. The song was written by Francis Scott Key on September 13th, 1814 while on a mission to the British fleet, then bombarding Baltimore, to secure the release of his intimate friend Dr. Beanes. Key was forced to stand by and observe the bombardment of Fort McHenry, and his joy at finding the American flag still flying after the battle inspired the song. Eight days later, on the twenty-fifth the song was first printed in the Baltimore American, but the author's name did not appear.

Few students of Alabama history know of the connection the author of the National Anthem had with Alabama, but this connection was marked and had a lasting effect.

Mr. Key was commissioned while serving as District Attorney for the District of Columbia, to proceed to Alabama to aid the United States District Attorney for the Southern District in the legal investigations growing out of the conflict between the State and the Federal authority. He reached the state late in the year of 1833 o serve as a representative of th federal government in its direct dealings with the state government in the matter of the proposed removal of settlers from the newly organized counties of Alabama.

The conflict which threatened the two governments was caused by the wording of the Fifth Article of the Indian Treaty which provided for the removal of all white intruders from the ceded territory of 1832 until the government surveys were completed and various allotments made to the ninety principle chiefs and heads of Creek families. Where white persons had made improvements, they were allowed to remain until their crops were gathered.

As soon as Alabama took over the ceded territory of 1832, there began to be trouble with the Indians and open revolt toward the government on the part of something like 25,000 persons who had come into the disputed territory. The new town of Irwinton was burned by federal soldiers and the Lieutenant in command was threatened with arrest but the Deputy Sheriff who attempted to execute the warrant was pierced by the bayonet of a federal private.

Open revolt of United States authority became so manifest that the United States Marshal for the Southern District of Alabama, Jere Austill hero of the Canoe Fight, proceeded to execute his orders for removal and Hardeman Owens, a County Commissioner for Russell county, was killed by a federal soldier in the yard of his home, 12 miles below Fort Mitchell.

Mr. Key's arrival at Tuscaloosa on December 16, 1833 began formal negotiations for a settlement of the differences between the two governments and his stay of several months in Alabama formed an episode long to be remembered in our history.

Mrs. Gayle, wife of the governor, in the mansion of whom Key was a frequent guest, wrote of her impressions of the visiting attorney in these words:

"He is pleasant, intelligent, you at once perceive, and somewhat peculiar in his manners. He is a little, nay, a good deal absent in company, not always attending when others converse, and often breaking in with a question, though evidently unconscious of what he has done. He is a man of much intelligence, a lawyer of high standing, a man of honor, a poet and a Christian."

Dr. Thomas C. McCorvey has given us these in his very interesting sketch of the mission of Mr. Key to Alabama in 1833.

12 Years Ago TODAY

From The Daily of October 5, 1913

October 5 falling on Sunday, there was no issue of The Daily of that date.

The entire state of Alabama feels honored in the election of Oscar Wells, of Birmingham, as president of the First National bank.

December should bring about some wonderful developments for this state. The Muscle Shoals controversy will be reopened, John Rogers and his "pet," the $75,000,000 bond issue, will occupy the center of the state legislatve stage. We have some wonderful local accomplshments scheduled prior to that month and during that month. Indeed, the year is most productive for North Alabama.

The proof of the fruits of teamwork is shown in the result of the Nebraska-Illinois game of Saturday. Nebraska won, though Illinois came to the gridiron with the famous Grange added to her offense. Nebraska plodded through the game, mnus a great backfield star, a foundation laid for victory in a strong front line. It is interesting to watch a machine triumph over an individual, no matter how great that individual may be. We are all small in comparison with the great world around us, the qualities of friendship count the most in supreme tests. We can accomplish good through individual effort, but a greater good results from an organized force.

LIKE AN ACHING TOOTH SECOND AVENUE REMAINS

Second Avenue, like the world as some poets see it, is too much with us, at least in its present condition. The busy man or woman who comes to town for a shopping tour goes home all out of sorts having again suffered an attack of "avenuitis." Very much like an aching tooth the avenue will remain with us until a cure is effected. The cure will be in the form of paving of the obnoxious part.

Friday night at the meeting of the Albany city council a proposal was made that the city bear a third of the expense and the property owners the other two-thirds. Based on one conclusion this proposal is sound, both the property owners and the city will benefit through the repairing of the Avenue. The city will be commended by others for a beautiful thoroughfare through the center of population and the credit will reflect upon the property owners. On the other hand the avenue repair will greatly improve the property which fronts on the street, thus making it more valuable and consequently a decided gain for the property owners. Why then should the city be asked to bear the expense of the street building? This is not repair work, or resurfacing that is to be done, this is to be a repaving of the Avenue and legally the property owner is entitled to pay for the improvement.

In either event that the council decides that the avenue is to be paved let us hope that the work will be started at an early date. The avenue goes from bad to worse as the days roll on and consequently is becoming a greater nuisance. As one citizen expressed himself regarding the proposed state bond issue, "I don't care how much the roads cost, just so we have the roads in the end." We feel that a majority of the property owners feel the same way about Second Avenue and the rest of the people who are suffering the inconvenience of the rough street are hopeful that there will be no more delay.

THE DEPARTURE OF A GOOD CITIZEN THE GAIN OF ANOTHER SECTION

Sunday, the pulpit of the Westminster Presbyterian church was declared vacant following the resignation of Dr. L. F. Goodwin several weeks ago. Dr. Goodwin leaves the cities after a residence of eight years.

It cannot be said that the minister's residence here has been but a residence, an existence bound up in the teachings of the word of God one day a week, he was not of that type. His work has been among all classes of people, all religions. He has not confined his constructive work to the benefit to be given to himself or his congregation.

While here, it was noticeable that this good man was identified with nearly every constructive work brought into the cities and if convinced of the worth of any particular project, he served gladly, efficiently and nobly.

The character of the man attracted hundreds who came to know him through others though they may not have come in daily contact with the work which he carried on. His gentle manner, his broad outlook, and his tolerance of the faults of others, endeared him to the hearts of thousands of friends who feel extreme regret that he is to leave here.

Dr. Goodwin early became identified with the constructive element. He was not one to wait when a question arose for discussion. He took his stand, alone if necessary if he felt that he was in the right, after careful consideration and his words were regarded as the voicing of sound reasoning. His advice was respected and sought.

We thank Dr. Goodwin for the work he has accomplished here, we express an appreciation for the service he has given to these cities. We hope that he will be pleased in his new surronndings and that the same success which he enjoyed here will follow him down the pathway of life. We feel a distinct loss in his going, envying the city he his new surroundings and that the same success which has always been his pleasure to carry forward.

FREDERICK I. THOMPSON QUITS SHIPPING BOARD

Frederick I. Thompson, known all over Alabama, a man who has been in the thickest of Alabama's political frays and who has stood for his honest convictions and principles, it became known Sunday, has tendered his resignation to President Coolidge and on November 1 will leave the shipping board. Mr. Thompson declared in a letter to the president that he did not wish to see the gulf states deprived of representation on the board in as much as it is the intention of authorities to abolish the board and thus do away with regional representation in the operation of the government's merchant marine.

Mr. Thompson declared he desired to resign from the important post that he might get into the field and work against the abolishing of the shipping board, he does not think that the gulf section, which handled 38 per cent of the exports last year, should be deprived of representation.

The veteran publisher has taken a notable stand in this resignation. He is correct in refusing to fight the administration so long as he is connected with the administration and is responsible to others higher up in the fulfilling of his duties. He has done the sensible and right thing in getting out of the way if he cannot agree with the board.

So far as his personal stand on this particular subject is concerned, we feel that he is justly correct. The gulf section should have representation and a "say so" in what rules and regulations are established.

Mr. Thompson is going to fight the move to abolish and we believe that he will find a worthy number of constituents who will join with him in battling the administration idea for abandoning regional representation of governmental shipping and attaching the shipping board to some executive branch of the government. What Mr. Thompson fears regarding a lack of representation is almost certain to come true. It will again be the same old story of the South waiting on the rest of the nation to eat the pie, then the southland might come in for a share of the crusts, though this same southland might have had a leading hand in the making of the pie.

THE HIGHWAY PROGRAM OF OTHER STATES, A COMPARISON

Recently, in an address made here on the occasion of the bridge celebration, Chairman John A. Rogers challenged any state in the nation to show the result that the present commission has as its record since going into office. Chairman Rogers has done a good work since entering hs term of servce, but he over-stepped the bounds slightly when he challenged the nation.

The October issue of the Highway Magazine tells of the work of the Idaho Highway department and we feel that while Mr. Rogers and his board have made untold progress in this state we cannot help but point to the achievements of that three-man commission in Idaho with a greater problem to face than has stood before the Alabama commission.

Ernest Flagg Ayers, writing of the development of the highway commission of that state says, "With only a half a million population to pay for the building of roads throughout an area of 83,888 square miles, the State of Idaho, through a well organized highway department, and spurred on by the necessity for providing employment just after the war for a great number of returning soldiers, has made an excellent record in the construction of a modern highway system."

The Idaho legislature started work in 1913 and appointed three commissioners, the Federal government did not come to assist until 1916, then the great war stopped all road building. Following the world conflict, the boys came home, shed their uniforms, and demanded employment. Idaho responded to the full limit of her resources. During the next two years nearly nine million dollars worth of highway contracts were awarded on federal aid, forest aid and state aid projects. Funds were raised on the levy of two mills on all property in the state, through district, county and state bond issues and through special assessments made through the smaller political subdivisions. Nearly all work done between the years of 1913 and 1920 was done during this two year period. Idaho, with a population of only half a million could not build permanent roads and her greatest problem became, not the building of roads but the maintenance of the system then constructed. Country wide demand for retrenchment came and the state again responded by dropping the two mill levy and substituting a two cent tax on gasoline. As a result the state of Idaho has a road system and while it is not of a permanent character, the heretofore impassable mountain roads can be traveled throughout the year.

That is no small accomplishment for that state and it reminds Alabamians of the better advantages offered in this state in the matter of geographical outlay. The state of Alabama has not the terrors of mountains to confront, this state's difficulty has been in the marshes and swamps, such roads proving impassable for three-fourths of the year.

Chairman Rogers has worked faithfully since going into office and he has made rapid strides with the funds given him and the many obstacles and blocks placed in his way. His one error, as we see it, has been in the building of roads not of a permanent character. Alabama is faced now with the problem of maintenance, an item which cannot be overlooked if the state is to have the roads necessary to take care of the enormous expansion now underway and which will double in the years to come.

The bond issue, asked by the highway department to be placed in the December call of the legislature, is the answer to Alabama's problems. We can either go ahead with the wonderful work that is now started, or we can remain with the hindrance of bad roads hung like a mill stone about our necks.

We believe that the people of this state will gladly support the issue provided they can be given just reason for voting for it. The substantial reason for the bond issue can be found in actual work of the highway commission looking toward the construction of highways of a permanent system from one end of the state to the other. Passage of this issue is sufficient for the highway commission to throw open the gates and invite construction over the entire state. The state of Alabama must have the roads and the highway commission will have to have sufficient appropriation to make the roads possible. We are all tired of standing in the rut, seeing tourists turned along other trunk routes and witnessing the isolation of the agricultural trades area throughout five to nine months of the year. The commission has but to assure the people of Alabama that roads will be built of a permanent character from one end of the state to the other and the funds will be forthcoming.

true democrats are modern French leaders.

Old Marshal Joffre, working in his garden, in the plain clothes of a French peasant, is annoyed by a request to represent the Academy of Immortals, celebrating the anniversary of the victory of the Marne. "Mais quoi donc," exclaimed the old fighter. "Is this sort of thing going to take place every year'

THERE is a real democrat. Joffre fought the battle and won the victory for his country, that is enough He doesn't want to be bored by celebrating and hearing himself praised every year.

You won't always find that frame of mind among our eminent statesmen.

CAILLAUX, representing France suggests that the United States might be content to accept payment in full, over a period of sixty years of all the money that the United States lent to France and not charge interest.

THAT interest would run into billions of dollars it is true. But those millions would not be enough to pay what this country owes to France. To her inspiration and genius we owe the mental power of men like Franklin and Jefferson, their contempt for kings, and their leadership that made possible our revolution in 1776.

Whatever that revolution was worth to us, we should recognize in our dealings with France.

THE Methodist Episcopal church investigating conditions in New York, announces that the city is on trial and seriously considers recommending that whole monstrosity 'be wiped out."

"Throughout the greater part of the United States," say the Methodist Episcopal authorities "the people are asking whether they have created a Frankenstein in building the gigantic city.

IT IS a serious question to New York especially.

Methodist Episcopalians learn with violent alarm that bad as the theaters have been in New York," the present season is to be the profanest and most immodest in American history."

THAT'S BAD, but church authorities should consider how many things would be wiped out, along with the theaters and the bootleggers, if you wiped out New York.

Columbia College and the University of New York would go, also the Metropolitan museum, and the museum of natural history.

Those four institutions may in time do more than enough good to counterbalance all the harm that can ever be done by young theater ladies, inadequately clothed—assuming that New York is as bad as these religious gentlemen think it.

ALSO consider the eminently respectable concerns that would have to go, should New York take the Sodom and Gomorrah, 'cure.'

J. Pierpont Morgan would vanish with Kuhn, Loeb and company, Dillon Reade, S. W. Strauss and company, and with them would go a thousand other names each of which one means big money.

THOSE institutions do not work in New York only, or even chiefly. They build railroads, houses, factories, finance and make possible enterprises all over the United States.

Have a kind word for New York city, to cut it out of the United tSates might mean a very serious major operation, dangerous for the patient.

The Daily department of commercial printing prides itself in placing the newest quality job in the cities into the hands of buyers. The service given is the best to be obtained and at a reasonable and fair price. Call 46, our representatives will be glad to call and figure with you.

WHY GO OUT TO MEET ADVANCING YEARS?

Keep Young by New Recreations, Be Active in Outdoor Pursuits and Acquire New Interests To Enlarge Your Life.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IN one of his books, my friend, Dr. Frank Crane, says: "Be children, all of you, be children. God save us from an elderly, respected world. Be children and learn how to play."

That is good advice.

Have you ever observed the difference between one old man and another? One is spry, good natured, alert and young in spirit despite his years. The other is lame and halting, uncertain on his pins, and ever cross and crabbed.

It is a pity to grow old. Old age and death must come, of course. But why encourage age? Why go out to meet increasing years?

There are fundamental reasons why some persons seem much older than others who have had exactly the same number of birthdays.. It isn't a matter of the spirit alone; there are physical reasons for the difference.

Local disease, characterized by decay or pus formation, will produce conditions capable of undermining the strongest body and the sweetest spirit.

Neglect of the mouth, the preservation of a few old roots of teeth, permitting a chronic nasal catarrh, bronchitis or running ear to go on year after year without real attempt at cure, disregarding an obstinate constipation or a persistent diarrhoea, and overlooking a long-standing involvment of the generative organs—in one or more of these careless acts may be discovered the foundation of a rapidly progressing old age.

But if there is no underlying physical defect, if all the organs are sound and functioning as they should there is no excuse for going way to advancing years. Here is where we need the stimulation of Dr. Crane's advice. We need to answer his appeal by the determination to be young, to be children.

When you advance in create new interests if you have tired of the old ones. Cultivate a hobby. Collect stamps or coins, interest yourself in the church, the lodge or in politics. Get pleasantly excited over community matters.

Learn to play golf or even to run an automobile. Every day I see a man of ninety riding a bicycle past my door. It can be done.

Learn how to play, even though you haven't played since you were a little child. Don't fold your hands and invite death! Don't stand on your dignity. Don't crave to be "old and respected." Be young and act young, no matter if it shocks the neighbors. They may call you an "old 'ool," but be glad if they do. Folks never call a dying man an old fool, so if they call you that you may thank God and take courage. You are on the way to a happy and active old age when you will be spoken of as "eighty years young." Learn how to play!

I have noticed in your paper recently the fight that is being made to eradicate the mosquito. While the fight is on I think officials should look after the hundreds of dipping vats that are a menace to the country and a breeding place for thousands of mosquitoes. Children might also be drowned in them. They can be filled up in a way that they will not be dangerous. Why can not the health officials look after such places?

THOUGHTS OF THE WEEK

By J. A. West

ENCOURAGEMENT

The failure to put the above heading into practice with the ones whom we brush elbows daily, is no doubt the cause of man ya sad and despondent heart, whereas, if the encouraging word had been spoken at the psychological moment, a light heart would have been the reward of both the giver and the recipient, and the task would have been lighter, and the achievement greater.

What harm is there to speak encouraging words? What gross error could be the result of compliments when they were due? What harm could come from the word of encouragement to some one who was making a worthy effort, and was really accomplishing something?

How could you be doing the unseemly thing if you compliment your banker in the manner in which he handles your account, and the many times during the year you are the recipient of little favors at the hands of the personnel of his bank?

Your grocer would be a better grocer, and his weary limbs would quicken steps no doubt, if a little praise from his customers was handed out to him occasionally, on the promptness he displayed, and the care in selecting the groceries you order.

Your physician could rise from his bed with a lighter heart when called, if the one making the call had taken occasion to thank him for his services, and to compliment him on the manner in which he handled the sick patient in your home.

Your school teacher, those who have the care of your children practically the entire day, five days in the week, (and Oh who a nerve racking duty) could go about the duties of the school room and the task would be lighter, if parents would take time to compliment them on the interest they were taking in seeing that the children under their care were making the right progress in school.

Children would no doubt make greater progress if we would take the time to stress the fact that we were delighted at the manner in which they were progressing in their studies, and say also how glad we were to see them taking such an interest in the school, and the good reports they were making each month.

Your newspaper publisher, the forgotten man, who must think seven days and nights each week in order that he may meet the demands of a critical public, and have the columns of his paper brim full of just the right kind of news, would be tickled to death if you would make it a point to call his attention, and thank him, and shower compliments on him about his paper, and the fine editorials he was writing, and the clean paper he was sending out. He's human, and you would be surprised at the electrical effect it would have on the entire personnel of the plant. You may strike a fellow occasionally who may say he don't like a compliment. He's just joking, he don't mean it. There never has been a fellow yet, and there never will be one found, who does not like to see his name in print when something complimentary is being said of him.

THEATRES

Every angle of a social situation that has become the subject of bitter argument is portrayed in "The Mad Whirl," Universal Jewel all star production to be shown in the Princess theater commencing tomorrow. The picture comes announced, not as a preachment, nor a vehicle pointing any moral, but strictly a vehicle interpreting to vividly portray those accused of being disciples of jazzmania.

But is more than the evils possible by reason of super-indulgence in this so-termed menace to the people of the land that are laid bare in "The Mad Whirl," for the picture deals specifically with the possible effect on the family relations of such indulgence.

Mac McAvoy has the feature role in a cast which is unusually notable for the prominence of those who play the various characterizations. Jack Mulhall has the juvenile lead, and others are Myrtle Stedman, Barbara Bedford, Alec B. Francis, Ward Crane George Fawcett, Marie Astaire and Joseph Singleton. William A. Seiter who directed "The Family Secret" and "The Fast Worker" made "The Mad Whirl," which is the screen version of "Here's How' a short story by Richard Washburn Child.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

About five months ago I moved to a new town. Before I moved, there was a young man who seemed to love me dearly.

Before I left he made me promise to write him immediately, saying he would do the same. After I moved I wrote him, as I had promised, but after writing once he has never written again.

He has been in this town several times since—always with a crowd. They always come to my home, but beyond a formal greeting and farewell he never seems to notice me.

I have done nothing to cause him to act in this way and he doesn't seem to care for any other girl.

What can I do to regain his former feeling for me?

LOU.

LOU: Put the young man out of your thoughts now, for he isn't worthy of your esteem. Don't lower your pride any way, but be just as friendly and cordial as you can possibly be. Take your cue from his actions and don't wear your heart on your sleeve when he's around. Enjoy yourself with your other friends and don't make yourself miserable over the neglect of a thoughtless man.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

HUMAN BONES ARE FOUND BY FARMER

House At Birmingham Was Declared To Be "Haunted"

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 5.—County authorities today were investigating reports that parts of a human body had been found on a farm at West Sunnyside, near Jones Valley high school, by H. G. Lovlorn, who recently moved onto the place. Mr. Lovlorn told officers that numerous bones had been found about the place, while he was cleaning it up, after having rented it. He did not know the former occupants.

Mr. Lovlorn told authorities that he had been warned before going on the farm that is was haunted. He paid no heed and moved in. Mrs. Lovlorn first noticed bones in the back yard, but she thought they were bones of a hog. Mr. Lovlorn found part of a right hand and a shoulder blade near the barn. He immediately advised authorities of his discovery.

The dismembered parts indicated that they had lain on the ground for at least three months.

Agriculture Has Profitable Year

Agriculture has been fairly profitable this year and the improved purchasing power of farmers will do much to uphold general economic well-being through the winter, the United States department of agriculture declares in its October report on the agricultural situation. The department points out, however, that while conservative judgment of the recovery of agriculture is warranted, farm prosperity can be as easily over-rated as depression.

"It is a splendid harvest," the department says. "Not bumper yields but production well adjusted to reasonable needs. The two great money crops, cotton and wheat, are now along where some idea can be gained of their value. Cotton apparently stands to bring its producers an income of approximately $1,500,000,000, which is about like last year and wheat producers apparently stand to receive about $1,000,000,000 which is also near or slightly below last year.

"These two leading crops probably index the general crop income. Agricultural income will not be greatly in excess of last year, but the point is that thi sis the second fairly profitable year. The season will go a long way to level up regional conditions. The corn belt along with the dairy and diversified east have been slow to feel the stimulating current of revival, but now the rising prices of hogs and cattle, together with a reasonably good corn crop means some profit in the corn belt. The slowly strengthening prices for dairy products plus higher potatoes and minor cash crops promise somewhat better income for the east. The whole agricultural map thus slowly emerges from economic shadow."

Discussing the situation by key regions, the department says:

"The east is busy with silo filling, potato digging, fruit harvest and fall work generally. Potato yields are disappointing. Corn growth is excellent, helped by late rains. Beans, buckwheat and other crops in harvest were damaged by heavy rains in the north. Winter grain is mostly seeded. The dairy situation is rather static but improves rather than otherwise.

"The South is generally under the bane of dry weather. Drougt and heat have been a real catastrophe in northern Goergia and portions of the Carolinas. The whole Piedmont region is hard hit. The cotton crop is spotted but generally fairly good. Picking is well along and ginning has been heavy. Feed crops have been shortened by dry weather. General conditions are fairly good except in drought areas.

"The corn belt has the corn harvest well along with the crop matured safely ahead of frost. There is some chaffy corn in areas hit by dry weather but the bulk of the crop is apparently good grain. The region is busy with the late harvest and fall work. Winter grain has been planted under favorable conditions. The hog and cattle situation generally favor optimism.

"The wheat belt has winter wheat seeding about finished. Local estimates of acreage vary but general indications are of some increase over last fall. Spring wheat yields are only fair but grain is excellent quality and prices are stimulating. Threshing is practically finished. The general result of the season is favorable to the region as a whole.

"The range country has the cattle and sheep movement to market well along. Stock is moving down from the high range to winter pastures. There is a heavy demand for ewes. Many ewe lambs are being held back on range and many old ewes shipped to farm flocks for breeders. Some cattlemen are stocking up where resources are favorable and the whole region is improving in tone.

"On the Pacific coast the apple and grape harvests are well along. Prunes are picked. Grain is mostly threshed. Fall seeding is about finished in the north though hindered by dry weather. The same is true of winter trucks in the south. Cotton is being picked in the south. Rice and citrus fruit are developing well. The general sentiment is moderately optimistic."

The department's index of the relative purchasing power of 30 farm products is placed at 93 for August compared with 91 in July, the five year 1909-14 average of 100 being used as a base.

GINNINGS HIGHER NOW THAN LAST SEASON

The ginning figures at the four gins here are already higher than the entire season last year. Cotton is still coming to be ginned, and it looks now as if the rush will be kept up through October.

Practically every farmer now admits that they are making from two to five bales more than they calculated to get when the drouth set in. The absence of the weevil entirely no doubt accounts in a large measure for this increase. From no section in the territory served by the gins here has the report of any weevil infestation been reported.

Many are of the opinion that with a reasonably cold winter we shall be through with the evils of the boll weevil.

The First Methodist Sunday school raised something over a hundred dollars last Sunday morning, this amount being sent to the Methodist Orphanage at Selma. The superintendent of the school announced last Sunday a week ago that the collection would go to the orphanage, and this handsome amount was the result.

Owing to the illness of the pastor, Rev. R. W. Anderson, Prof. W. T. Tiller of the M. C. H. S., occupied the pulpit at the First Methodist church at the 11 o'clock service last Sunday. There was no preaching at the evening hour.

In the absence of a pastor at the First Baptist church, Prof. H. T. Lile occupied the pulpit at the eleven o'clock hour last Sunday morning.

SATURDAY, FINE TRADE DAY

Saturday was the best trade day of the present Fall for Hartselle. The town was crowded with farm wagons from early until late in the afternoon, there being a disposition to make purchases for needed things for the coming winter more in evidence than at any other time since the cotton season begun. All merchants report a satisfactory business last Saturday.

Merchants report the payment of accounts ahead of any other previous year, many meeting their obligations before due, especially was this true of commercial fertilizers, the notes not being due until October 1, a large portion of them being paid off in September.

Three car loads of cedar lumber were shipped from here to the Memphis, Tenn., market last week. Besides this cedar, there were other cars of pine and oak lumber which was shipped out to various destinations. Several thousand cross ties are on the right of way awaiting shipment also. These natural products mean much in the financial business of a section and town, and annually thousands of dollars worth of these products are shipped from this point.

The new fence empletely encircling the Fair grounds has been completed, and the attention of the Fair officials will now be turned to some improvements on the grounds and buildings inside the inclosure. The race track will be put in fine condition, a fine string of horses having been secured by the management for racing during the four days of the Fair. The Sunshine Shows have been engaged by the management for the mid-way, the reputation of these shows being very fine.

The M. C. H. S. football team played their initial game of the season last Friday afternoon, journeying to Guntersville where they engaged the Guntersville High team. They delivered a genuine defeat to the Sand Mountain boys, the score being 44-0. Their next combat will be with Gurley at Gurley.

During the fair days, October 23. M. C. H. S. meets Cullman High the game to be played at the fair grounds M. C. H. S. team looks mighty good this year, and a big effort will be made to wrest the game from Cullman High on that eventful day, October 23.

Last Wednesday morning there came one of the heaviest rains of the last eight or nine months to a section three miles southeast of Hartselle, it being estimated that more than two inches of rain fell over a small area at that time. The rain was local, a slight shower reached here on that occasion.

Jim Gibson is having a handsome bungalow home built on his lots in the eastern part of town. Mr. Gibson had a well drilled there three weeks since, and when at a depth of something over forty feet, an underground lake of water was reached, rising to a depth of forty feet in the well in a few minutes.

SPORTS

Falkville Contest Looms As Season Opener With Y Clan Friday Afternoon

Bringing the strongest possible eleven here next Friday the Falkville clan will endeavor to wipe out old scores with the Y. M. C. A. squad for the last season scoreless tie played by the two teams at Falkville. Falkville is making no bones about the prospects for victory, backers declaring that the Falkville crew will outpoint the Y cleated hordes at least 27 points.

The game will be called at Malone Park Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock and Manager Arvidson announced today that the score of the world series will be announced for the benefit of baseball fans who wish to attend the local game and hear the series at the same hour.

Coach Ashwander took his scanty squad on the field this afternoon in a determined effort to undermine Falkville's chances. The Y team is not at all confident over the outlook and feel that they will have to put up the battle of their lives if they are to register a victory in the first start of the year.

Falkville will play the best available men, no eligibility rules barring men against participating. Chief among these prospects from the outside is "Flivver" Ford, for years one of the main cogs in Auburn's line plunging tactics. Ford is with the Falkville institution this year and will be seen Friday either in the backfield or on the line. Falkville has a number of dependables in Summerford Burdick, Tomlinson and McGlathery, all these men showing to their best against Moulton last Friday when the Falkville squad dumped the Lawrence county boys with a 44-0 score.

The Y. M. C. A. backfield is arranged for the opening fray with Ellison Braswell, McRee and Johnson as the local "Four Horsemen," holding Speer and McRae in reserve. The line remains a problem for the Y mentor to work out.

The game will open the activities for the Y squad this year and is regarded as one of the heaviest on the schedule. The local lads will go into the game with a weight handicap and many of them without having had previous experience to call upon in charging out a heavier line. Ashwander has been working for the past two weeks in teaching the fine points of line play, but much improvement is necessary before a line can be placed on the field that will stop the rushes of powerful and experienced backs.

At this time of the year the majority of folks are thinking of the football arena, but local sport celebrities have received word from authoritative source that organized baseball will be the valley dish for the coming summer. An effort is being made to enter Sheffield with either Huntsville or Albany-Decatur in the Tri-State League for the coming year and the matter will be brought before the directors of the league at the coming meeting. All that has been asked is that popular sentiment be expressed by local fans regarding the outlook for the coming season.

Hundreds of baseball fans in this section have wanted organized baseball for a number of years and leaders today expressed themselves as believing that organized baseball will pay in these cities. A hookup with Sheffield or Huntsville should cut the expense of visiting teams to a great extent, allowing the local team to bring clubs here at the expense of a short jump from Huntsville to the Twin Cities.

It is to be hoped that organized baseball will again reign in the valley section, the people are in favor of it and will support a good team.

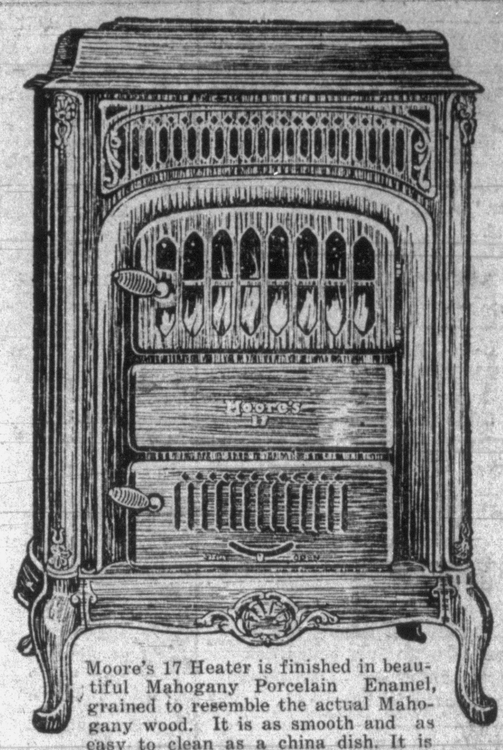
"after every meal"

'Heat your house all Over!'

You don't have to put up with the inconvenience of an old fashioned heating stove— and it is not necessary to buy an expensive Furnace, either.



Moore's 17 Heater is finished in beautiful Mahogany Porcelain Enamel, grained to resemble the actual Mahogany wood. It is as smooth and as easy to clean as a china dish. It is of a harmonious size to blend with the other furnishings of your home.
